SERBIA AND HUNGARY
STRAINED FOR YEARS.

The immediate cause of the break between Austria and Serbia was the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife as the result of a Serbian plot.

Diplomatic relations between the two nations have been strained for ten years, the trouble starting in a quarrel over a treaty. In 1908, Austria annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina. After the Balkan War, Austria tried to force Serbia to withdraw her troops from Albania. In event of war, European countries will line up as follows:

Serbia, Russia, France, the United States, Greece, Italy, Japan, and the United States. On the other hand, the first named combination has military forces of 2,277,000 men and 1,073 ships of war. The latter alliance can put 2,170,157 men into the field and has a navy composed of 265 ships.

LONDON, July 27.—Glimmers of hope flickered in the darkened sky of Europe today and the wish was general that the armed forces of the European powers to avert a clash of arms which might involve many nations would succeed.

While all the powers were preparing for possible contingencies, their stance toward the Balkan crisis was not uniform. The British foreign secretary, while declining to bring together the governments at issue with view to mediation, at the Serbian legation in London, he held that some improvement had taken place in the situation and this was attributed to the influence of Russia.

SERBIAN SPIES IN BELGRADE.

By Associated Press.

VIENNA, July 27.—A communication from the Austro-Hungarian foreign office today says that the Austrian spy of the Serbian capital, in Austria, is demanding the extradition of the Serbian spy and the punishment of those concerned in the killing of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort. The communication also gives the reason for Austria's dissatisfaction with Serbia's reply. It follows:

"The object of the Serbian note is to create the false impression that the Serbian government is prepared to great measure to comply with our demands. As a matter of fact, Serbia's note is filled with a spirit of dishonour which clearly betrays the fact that the Serbian government is not seriously determined to put an end to the culpable tolerance it hitherto extended to internationalism against the Austro-Hungarian monarchy."

GERMANY CALMLY WAITS

The military government in Germany calmly awaits the outcome of the crisis. It is stated that no orders have been issued for the army and that furloughs to the soldiers in order that they might help in the field work at their home during the harvest have not been interrupted.

JUMPS FROM TRAIN TO ESCAPE ARREST; IS KILLED*Smithfield Youth Leaps When Trainman Called; Suffers Fractured Skull.

Jumping from a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at Morgantown yesterday, a 20-year-old youth, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Klingman, of Smithfield, was instantly killed. Klingman, Frank Miller, 17 years old, and Hildegarde, 18 years old, yesterday started out from Smithfield to buy their hand in "bumming." They went to Morgantown on a freight and started to return home as "blind beggars."

As the train passed Sixth street, Morgantown, the baggage-master opened the door onto the platform where the young men were standing. Klingman started to leap and the baggage-master called to him not to jump. Probably fearing arrest he plunged. The two companions left the train at the City and notified the watchman of the Star Glass company. A Morgantown policeman was then notified and the body of Klingman was found a short distance from the track. His skull was fractured.

The body was brought to the Klingman home last night. Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock it will be removed to the Methodist Episcopal church for services. Rev. J. E. Dippel will officiate. Interment in the Baptist cemetery.

READ CALMETTE'S WILLM. Calhoun Shows Rapid Increase of Editor's Fortune.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, July 27.—When M. Calhoun took her seat today in the Palace of Justice for the seventh day's hearing of her trial for the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, she appeared much calmer than in the preceding days. She had, however, suffered from two fainting spells as a result of the severe strain she underwent on Saturday.

As soon as Judge Abnabel and his three associates had taken their seats on the bench, M. Calhoun demanded to be heard. In so doing she ignored the request of the public prosecutor, M. Calhoun, to wait until the trial was over. She then read the will of her late husband, M. Calhoun, which disposed of 2,000,000 francs, M. Calhoun said, "we may well be astonished at the singularly rapid increase in M. Calhoun's fortune."

He also says Wilkesburg has some firemen who are going to make him "an all crazy." The boys over there have gone to considerable expense to equip their darktown brigade and will be seen here with a full equipment of fire fighting devices.

The secretary of the McKees Rocks fire department says his town will be here with five hundred young, coming in a special train and one of the best brass bands in the Pittsburgh district. McKees Rocks is after the 1915 convention and when the firemen from that town go after anything they do it up right. Several other towns are strong for the convention next year and one of the hottest fights in years is looked for when the delegates land in town.

"Judge" Foreman of Piquette, Pa., is being groomed for a hot race in the most popular fireman's contest. Piquette is coming in a special train and while they have not entered any of the contests except the parade, they will have a crowd of hoosters in the neighborhood of McKees Rocks. This tip is sufficient to make some of the other candidates nervous. McKees Rocks is a member of the McKees Rocks fire department.

JESSE H. HERBERT, WEST SIDE JANITOR, PASSES AWAY*Stroke of Paralysis Suffered Three Years Ago Leaves Him in Poor Health.

Jesse H. Herbert, janitor of the West Side schools and a resident of the West Side for about 25 years, died Saturday evening at his home on Tenth street following a lingering illness. He had been in poor health for the past nine years and about three years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered. Arterio sclerosis was the immediate cause of his death. Funeral services were held this afternoon from the family residence with Rev. W. H. Gladden of Greenwood and Rev. T. M. Gladden of Dunbar officiating, interment in Hill Grove cemetery.

Mr. Herbert was 66 years old. He was born in Falling Waters, W. Va., December 12, 1848, a son of Hilary and Marie Herbert. He came to Broad Ford forty years ago and at one time was tax collector of Upper Tyrone township. He was twice married. July 3, 1876, he married Miss Rebecca Murphy. To this union three children, all deceased, were born. Mrs. Herbert died February 18, 1884, and September 27, 1885, he married Mrs. Virginia Smith of Broad Ford. To this union seven children were born, six of whom survive: Mary, wife of Dr. George McClelland of Wilkesburg; Ida Mae, wife of Ira Brooks of Scott Haven; Virginia Blanche, Gladys, Alice, Florance, all at home. In addition to his widow and children one brother, Milton Herbert of Williamsport, Md., two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Drake and Mrs. James Murphy, both of Falling Waters, W. Va., and two grand-children, J. Herbert Brooks and Marjorie Brooks survive.

For a number of years Mr. Herbert was employed by the Piquette Company and was later a teamster for Kell Long of the West Side, and a clerk for A. E. Wagoner. He was a janitor of the West Side schools for five terms and was re-elected for the sixth term. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church, having united with the Hickory Square church 40 years ago. On coming to Connellville his father was transferred to the city clerk's office. He was a trustee at one time. Among the out of town persons here for the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smith of Wilkesburg; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith of Uniontown; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. AS RANK IMPOSTERS*Party That Visited Connellville to Make Official Survey of Roads.

Association Says Good Roads Bureau

The suspicion expressed some time ago that Connellville people were neatly taken in by the three men who claimed to be government engineers engaged in laying out the Lincoln Highway and, who visited here some weeks ago, is borne out in a statement issued by the Lincoln Highway Association. The party which visited here in a big yellow touring car was headed by one John L. Schindler and investigation proves that he is not, nor never was employed by the government in this or any other kind of work.

The three alleged Lincoln Highway pathfinders blew into Connellville at 4 o'clock one morning in a big car. They had a conference with Mayor Marietta the next morning and gave out an interview to the newspapermen in which they declared that the Lincoln Highway would pass through Connellville. They were picking out the best roads between Uniontown and Connellville, they said.

One of the men touched a hotel proprietor for a loan of $15 until he got funds from the government. He has not gotten them yet, or, at least, he has not reimbursed the man who made the loan.

The "engineers" were only too sociable. One of them got chummy with Chief Dowers and volunteered to take him and two prisoners to Uniontown in the big car. The chief agreed to wait until 4 o'clock in the afternoon when the automobile never did return.

Where they went from here is not known for no published interviews appeared in other newspapers concerning them.

The Lincoln Highway association issues the following statement regarding them:

"Reports came to the National Headquarters of the Lincoln Highway Association that one John L. Schindler is traveling about the country giving out reports to the effect that he is in the employ of the United States Good Roads Bureau of the Department of the Interior and that he is surveying the Lincoln Highway for the government."

"This struck the Lincoln Highway Association as being interesting if true, and the Department at Washington was written. A wire just received by the Lincoln Highway Association from the Secretary of the Interior states that no person by the name of John L. Schindler is employed by either the Bureau of Roads or the Department of the Interior. A FAMOUS COME-BACK.

"Boys, they're coming back!" The observation of Editor Allen Foster of the Uniontown Herald at the meeting of the Republican County Committee recently in the subject of some comments by the Connellsville News which seem to indicate that Editor Thompson has an intent desire to be funny at the expense of Editor Foster. The result was rather painful to intelligent observers.

Editor Thompson ridicules the union of Republican unity and completely points to the fact that the Uniontown Herald has already sold out to Roosevelt for $50,000 damages for slanderous statements.

This is true, but Barnes and close self are not the only boys besides, we are to recall the current news reports, both are for the same Republican candidate for Governor of New York. To that extent at least the Colonel has come back.

Seriously speaking, the Republicans are getting together, and it becomes a question of whether they will get together. Those who don't stand a chance of getting left. Republicans who do the voting intend to see to it that the Democratic experiment is a closed incident. They have no interest in prolonging the old Republican quarrel. Their message to the Republican political leaders is "Forget it! that we're not Democrats."

Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that the boys are back and that the Colonel is getting there as fast as their legs will carry them.

In the language of our Democratic contemporaries, it will be a "famous come back."

UNION.

The News talks about the "back" due to politics. The News ought to be competent to talk on this point. The chief interest at this particular time is to be found in the Democratic party, and especially among the Democratic leaders, including the Harford boys of Pennsylvania and Fayette county.

Then boys are getting mighty restless over their alleged prospects. They see the clouds in the sky, they want disaster in the air; they are, indeed, restless.

They are worse than that; they are frantic and their mad distraction is faithfully reflected in the columns of their newspaper organs, especially that new one on the recently bought in Uniontown at a cost of $50,000 and under gratuitous professions of public virtue.

"Foster!" We should say so, it is not written that there shall be no rest for the wicked. The Democratic party has been an incompetent steward of a trust of affairs, and in order to have its criminal folly it is faithfully and carefully trying to derive the probable President assumes the country that becomes a state of mind and that its newspapers are busy telling of booms and busts in other sections than their own.

The Democratic party is filled with despair, but it is due to get a rest as soon as the Connellsville People have a chance to express themselves.

MACHINES.

In his spellbinding tour of the state, the Honorable A. Mitchell Palmer now and then refers to the Republican state organization as a political machine. The reference is distinctly derogatory. It is intended to convey the idea that there is something wicked about the Republican organization, and particularly that it is dominated by booms.

The Republican organization may be a machine and it may be based and it may be more or less wicked, but the Democratic organization measured by the same standard is all that and much more. Without spoils there can be no machines, and without machines there can be no booms. The Democratic organization based by the Honorable A. Mitchell Palmer controls and dominates all the federal offices in Pennsylvania. The conclusion is inescapable that there is but one machine and one boss in Pennsylvania this year, and both are Democratic.

The Republican state organization may be able to fool himself, but he will not fool the people. He places too low an estimate upon their intelligence.

COMPROMISE.

Candidate Palmer says Candidate French is a head man, but he is in a bad company when he is with Candidate Palmer. The Democratic boss seems to think Candidate French should make Candidate Palmer get off the ticket, or get off himself, an arrangement which doubtless would be completely satisfactory to Candidate Palmer in the first instance and to Candidate French in the last. The Republican candidate will run on the ticket if they were chosen by the public in votes at an open primary without the interference of the President of the United States and without promises of federal patronage or threats of the same being withdrawn. Candidate Palmer might compromise by withdrawing himself. That is the way Bruce Sterling did in Fayette county.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The success of the Democratic party in 1912 was due to a division in the Republican party. The Democrats have no hope of continuing in power through compromise of the kind that has been their policy in the past. The Republican party in money in general parties is the exception and the rule. For example the Democratic party is not now troubled by a large and respectable element of its members who are willing to sell out to the New York boss. The chief difference in this respect between the two great parties is that now the Republican party is just recovering from a severe attack of political unrest while the Democratic party is just developing a bad case of socialism.

Subgrave Manor, the home of George Washington's ancestor in England, has been purchased by public contributions in that country and dedicated to the American people. This act of courtesy should be long remembered. After all, the English and the Americans are of common blood and language. No other nation in the world stands in the same relation to us as Great Britain and her English-speaking colonies.

The advance agent of the coming French Convention is a regular queen.

The announcement that a whole family were poisoned by eating canned peas serves to remind us of the almost universal habit Americans have of eating out of cans at all seasons of the year. Fresh peas are still in season, while corn, beans, tomatoes and other green stuff are in the market; but as a rule the canned stuff is more convenient and more readily obtainable.

French trials and French dishes make fine movie stuff.

After doing all the damage they can, the army worm and the Democratic party will depart. There is consolation in the thought that neither will come back for a long time.

In the First City of Fayette it requires a license to do things. Strangers will do well to regulate their conduct with great discretion.

The rising generation of Smithfield yearns too much for the fast life. Sinful pleasures vouching on freight trains is highly exciting, but it is also highly dangerous. There is more comfort and profit at home.

Pinchot of Pike will be with us in August. He will appear in the role of the Old Settler and his political helion will be quite as thrilling as some of Ed. Mott's hour tales.

The P. & O. has renewed its promise of a new passenger station at Somerset. This is an ancient litigation.

Some of the militant female Socialists seem to be seeking the martyr's crown. Seeking it by the killer route takes much of the sentiment from it.

Vanderbilt's efficient fire department is kept on the job.

Republic got all the water in Fayette county yesterday evening. Republic is enterprising, and it is said that the local helps those who help themselves.

Another use has been found for smoke breezes, but the scramble for the breeze mountains has not commenced.

In general principles it is a crime to poison chickens when their heads slip off their necks so readily.

Abe Martin.

In addition to the above, the correct time is being invariably carried a sharp peak into the center of a fit man dressed in a suit. You can never tell what a woman or a country jury is going to do. You've got to go some if you come back.

Connellsville's Biggest and Best Store

124 WEST MAIN STREET

R E A L B A R G A I N S

FINER AND MORE FASHIONABLE GOODS, IN BIGGER AND BETTER ASSORTMENTS, AT ASTONISHINGLY LOW PRICES

WHAT IS BARGAIN DAY?

A few years ago the merchants of Connellsville set two days of mid-summer for demonstrating the advantages of buying in this city. By agreement, each merchant chose some item of in-demand merchandise from his stock and cut its price decisively—this to make it emphatically worth-while to visit Connellsville, even from afar. Patrons can supply all their needs for a long time to come, and at a great saving over usual prices. From the start-off, Bargain Days have been a grand success—thanks to the sincerity with which each store did its part.

Naturally, you would look to the biggest and best store for the most and finest bargains. A store can only offer what it has, so it stands to reason that you will get truer bargains—and spend less—in the store that has the most, and is known for its progressiveness, honesty of purpose and service-giving. Since last Bargain Day this Wright-Metzler store has extended its boundaries, enlarged the assortments in all departments and beautified and modernized the many selling-places. A big orderly store will hold more goods than will a little store, and its opportunity for buying splendid things for less than the smaller store must pay, is greatest. 1914 Bargain Days will find us with more attractive merchandise than last year. This because our enlarged stocks contain finer things than you can get at other stores. All of our goods belong to this season; all are high-quality, plain to very fashionable, fresh, clean and in the latest styles. Bargain Day assortments are larger than elsewhere, and Bargain Day prices, as this advertisement shows, are wonderfully low for the quality of goods they cover.

1914 Bargain Days are Tuesday and Wednesday, July 28-29

STATE WILL SPEND $20,099 ON ROADS IN THIS SECTION

Fayette to Get Big Share of the Fund Released for Highway Work.

WORK HAS ALREADY BEGUN

Twenty-Eight Men and Two Teams are on the job on the Uniontown-Connellsville Road through North
Union Township. To Cost $1,119.

Special to The Courier
HARRISBURG, July 26.—The ten days that have passed since it was decided that the automobile license fund should be turned over to the State Highway Department for maintenance and repair of roads have demonstrated that the amount of work necessary to put the highways in good shape for a season's expectations.
Nearly four thousand men have been laboring at top speed all over the state and while great improvement has been noticed in the condition of the roads, officials of the State Highway Department insist that it will be several weeks before a general plan can be started of the vast amount of work that is being done. The road officers of the department with after prolonged litigation in which they were defeated agreed to pay over to the State Highway Commission the automobile fund necessary to insure a good grade throughout the State. The amount involved in the 1914 fund was approximately $1,150,000 while $2,000,000 remained from the unexpended portion of the 1913 fund.
In view of the fact that the work and the vast amount of work to be done in filling up holes, cutting outitches, culverts and gutters and shaping up and rolling the highways, the State Highway Department has decided not to begin repairing on State highways until the general condition of the roads has been improved. A fact not generally understood is that the automobile license money is the only fund available for repairing, maintenance and construction of State highways. There is an unexpended balance for the maintenance and repair of State-Aid Highways and the State Highway Department has been working on these roads the amount of State Aid maintenance money now remaining is about $2,000.
From time to time additional authorizations will be made by the Maintenance Division for repairs on the roads. On many of these State-aid highways the repairs are extensive involving resurfacing with bituminous material and a practical reconstruction of the road to secure a better and more lasting highway.
In the District comprising Fayette,
Franklin and Washington counties $20,099 has been authorized this year. In Fayette county on the Uniontown and Connellsville road
the much North Union township $1,119 is needed. Twenty-eight men and two teams have been doing the work. On the road leading from Oliphant borough southwest to the National Pike a distance of a mile in Sewart township Fayette county $1,000 is needed.
The road running north from the Palmers & Ohio rail road in North
Union township for one mile needs $2,714 and twenty-eight men with three teams is required to do the work.
The road running from Ridgeport through Fayette county a distance of three miles for three-quarters of a mile needs $2,714. On the Connellsville road running from Perryopolis toward Washington county in Fayette township $1,952 is expended one mile of road leading from the National Pike at Smithfield to the highway to New York road $2,220.
In Washington county on the road leading from Charlestown to Maple creek a distance of three miles
$1,917 is needed. Twenty-five men have been working on it. On the Highway a distance of a mile and three-quarters through Robinson township needs $2,714 and sixteen men with three teams are working there.
On the highway extending south from the Washington and Bluestown road through Mount Pleasant township a distance of a mile and a half $1,614 is needed. A mile and a half of highway extending south from the National Pike toward Princeton through Fayette township will cost $1,000. This mountain road was built in 1907.

News of Photoplays and Photoplayers

MARY PICKFORD
(Famous Player)

MARY PICKFORD TODAY. A high light of the night show, the famous little actress Mary Pickford will play at the Seymour Theatre. Her play is "The Little Girl in the Big Woods." The play is a story of a little girl who is left alone in the woods and how she survives. The play is a story of a little girl who is left alone in the woods and how she survives. Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

"Prettiest girl in the world" who landed in New York, immediately became incandescent.

Individual drinking buckets for her as one of the innards. Fear of glances epidemic at the cause.

"Progressive" dinner in the latest Newport life. The guests will change places and dance between courses.

For selling liquor to a man after the man who told him not to. Hunting ton (N. Y.) hotel proprietor was fined $100.

Roosters are barred in Trenton N. J. in an ordinance before the afternoon but, as egg producers, may remain.

Report on moral conditions in New York N. Y. for the city league was delayed by the arrest of the man who was writing it.

TALKING MACHINE IN SUBWAY.

Paris Clothes and Chocolate Advertiser in Big Show in French Capital.

The Paris advertiser scheme in Paris recently, launched in the depths of the subway, adds a new trial to underground travel. An elegantly dressed man is appearing at one of the main exits at midnight during rush hours, carrying a large leather case, apparently containing photographic apparatus.

He took out something at the end of the case and a brilliant metallic voice of the talking machine began to recite a poem about the artist's cut and perfect finish of somebody's clothes. When that was over the waiting passengers were ordered in the same tones of metallic thunder to buy a certain brand of chocolate.

Lynching Record Lower. Records kept by the statistical division of Tuskegee Institute show that twenty lynchings occurred in this country in the first six months of this year. This is four fewer than in the same period last year and sixteen under the figures for the first half of 1912. Only one of the victims of lynching this year was white. Two of the negroes were women.

Yawning. When a man yawns he stretches his arms and legs and yawns. Birds and animals do so far as possible, follow his example. Birds open their feathers and yawn. Even open their mouths when they are tired, the bones of the head seem to loosen and the gills open.

Diogenes. "Why do you insist on understanding the mind of a dog?" "I am not," answered the wise official. "There is no use of making a whole lot of people alone and a dog, with a little thing like golf in exchange."

Corruption will never want a dog. —L. L. L.

FINDS WILDEST SAVAGES.

British Captain So Characterizes the Daffa Tribe of Northern India. There is a "River of Doubt" outside of Brazil. Before the Royal Geographical Society of England Captain P. H. Bailey, whose earlier studies of the map of Upper Brahmapoota—the mystery river of the north—were known to geographers, gave an account of the more recent exploration of 40 miles of that great stream. One of the "unconquered" tribes discovered by the travelers was a people of 100000. It will be called Gvahi Puri on the new map of the unknown land. Captain Bailey says the Daffa is a savage people of that region.

"They are the wildest wild men I ever saw. They had never heard of white people. They knew nothing about India. They would not accept money for their honey. They appeared to be without fear of us. They wanted nothing but white cloth. They took it from their hair by tying it in a knot over the forehead through which a brass or bamboo pin about a foot long is passed horizontally. In this is often a tuft of palm leaves."

What She Expected. "Look at her," said the ironmonger, indicating a dejected customer. She sent her unwilling hire to be repaired. I promised her for this week provided that I could get a certain new put in time from the makers. I couldn't get it. Now she wants me to fix a chairman—who is an uncooperative—built a crown and two-piece frame. Then she wants me to pay the sundy bill for the clothes. The ironmonger paused to breathe heavily. "But that's not all. Her husband dines out on wash days and as he dined out on a wash day which wasn't a wash day—on washday—she says I ought to pay for his dinner. No who doesn't eat anything else. And they call her the widow's son"—London Answers.

Indignant. Sir Douglas Straight used to tell a story of a libel case in which he had defended a man successfully on the ground that he was not to be regarded as an ordinary individual because he was in the habit of using the most outrageous language on the most trifling provocation. The jury accepted Sir Douglas's view and found for the defendant. But on leaving the court Sir Douglas met his client waiting for him in a doorway and said: "What do you think do you mean, sir, by saying that I am not to be treated like an ordinary man?"—London Standard.

One Dream Realized. "Strange," said the first tramp model, "how few of our youthful dreams ever come true." Oh, I think, said his companion. I remember I used to dream about wearing long pants and now I guess I wear 'em longer than any one else in the country."—Ladies Home Journal.

Summer Advertising

Salesmen usually go down in summer time because it is a time when they can get a lot of business. But there are a few things to be said for the winter season.

For winter is a time when the weather is just what you need. It is a time when you can get a lot of business.

The Rifle's Forbearance.

It is difficult now days, with our modern serviceable rifle before us, to believe that as recently as 1772 the rifle was a weapon of the last. In 1702 a match was shot at between an archer and a musketeer, in which the archer succeeded in sending sixteen out of twenty shots into the target to the musketeer's dozen. The danger was the rifle of the dream with which the original dragoon regiments were armed. It had a barrel only sixteen inches in length, and the muzzle was like a "gaping serpent's mouth." The carbine, which derived its name from a short dragoon originally used by the irregular cavalry of the Moors. The carbine of Charles I's time had a barrel only sixteen inches long and weighed about fifteen pounds in all. In the trial of the first percussion muskets against the flintlock 1000 rounds were fired from each. The official record was 1022 rounds against the flintlock, percussion musket, thirty-two misfires.—London Answers.

In addition to above genuine bargains we are going to sell 92 suits, mixed colors, sizes from 32 to 35 inclusive. These suits are out of our regular stock and will make a knockabout suit. We are limiting the sale of these suits to not over two to a customer at the unprecedentedly low price of ONE DOLLAR THE SUIT. Get busy if you want one.

SKIRTS OF NET.

They Make the Fashionable Turquoise Endurable in Hot Weather.

SMART FRENCH COSTUME

The long draped tunics which fashionable women are wearing this season are undoubtedly worn but French modistes with their customary ingenuity, have found a way to remedy this. Skirts are sometimes made with a net robe over which the tunic falls. Some costumes even have entire skirts of lace or net. The gown illustrated here was snapped at one of the French fairs where fashions are exploited. Tunic and corsage are of flow, and silk, with a satin stripe which runs up and down. The surplus is finished with a plaited fall of net, and the waist is encircled with a girde of satin ribbon. The skirt is of white net, adorned with rows of narrow frills.

FALL FASHIONS.

Height to Be a Requirement in Smart Hats For Fall.

"Extreme height is a note of the new fall models," says the Millinery Trade Review. "And this does not mean that there will not be any flat trimmings as silk and velvet frills and flowers give good promise for fall. Coque in its many clever new designs is being shown. The tops of this material in braided effect, the shape of an antelope, the immensely clever being placed on the top of a rather high crown; but in clusters of two or three."

Other models show bronzed coque forming mitre, pompadour accompanied by a high face effect. Curled coque in black, white and all the smart new shades for fall are all the height of. Manufacturers of coque feathers are showing numbers of new effects for fall which in true burnt effects in high fashions. The fall season always makes the demand for stylish stronger, and good results are expected."

Chairs With Pockets.

No porch is completely equipped without at least one chair that is furnished with a pocket for books and magazines and newellwork. These chairs are no longer a novelty. And like everything that has passed the stage of novelty they can be had for a reasonable price. One of substantial make with a back that measures twenty inches above the seat and that is high enough to support anybody's shoulders. The back is upholstered in a soft, velvety cushion and a seat of brown or green cloth included.

Flower Supports.

To go in the veranda jardiniere there are long wooden sticks, painted green and topped with little wooden birds of brilliant hues or with brownies or gnomes.

These are thrust into the vase or jardiniere when long stemmed flowers are wanted, and the heads of some of the flowers are tied to posts to keep them from falling.

These posts can also be used as stakes in the garden. They are very picturesque wherever they are used.

Floral Laces.

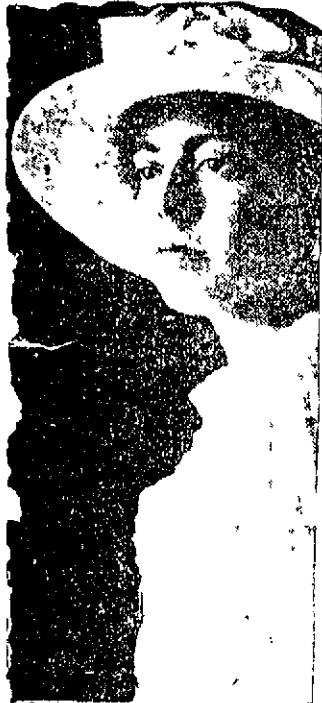

Among the decidedly effective ideas in colors are the net top laces with floral patterns painted in realistic shades says the Dry Goods Economist. In some instances the beauty of the designs is greatly enhanced by an outline of silver or gold.

Only the daintiest flowers are represented in these painted effects and so delicate are the hints that their appearance is lovely in itself. The painted floral idea also appears in fine chain tilly.

Japanese Idols.

Daintiness is the name of the Japanese sun god, while that huge idol with a multitude of hands is known as the Daiboth.

MISS LUCY BURLESON IS VERY POPULAR IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Miss LUCY BURLESON

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Miss Lucy Burleson is the prettiest young daughter of the postmaster general. She is one of the most charming of the younger Washington society set. Her varied literary ability and her winning personality make her much sought after at all social events where more than mere familiarity counts.

Refreshing the Vacationist.

For the woman vacationist who has no bathroom a huge bowl or better still, an old fashioned foot bathtub is essential. With the aid of either of these she can sponge in cool water in the morning and in water at night.

If her skin is sluggish and she has a generally rundown feeling in hot weather let her try the vinegar bath. For this allow a pint of pure cider or wine vinegar to two gallons which is about what is needed for the average sponge bath.

Put this into the basin and stand in the tub. Use a large sponge and fill it sopping with the mixture of water and vinegar. Close your eyes and press this to your face.

Repeat this several times and then proceed the same way, pressing the sponge to the base of your brain and on your shoulders until your body has been literally showered with vinegar and water. The body is then patting not rubbed dry and the patient should lie down and rest for awhile.

Simple Hair Tonic.

The following hair tonic is recommended as stimulating and nourishing. It will bring new life and blood to the hair bulbs. Before commencing treatment well wash the scalp with a warm soft water and a good shampoo. Take twenty grains of quinine sulphate, two drams of spirits of rosemary, two drams of the tincture of cantharides one and one-half drams of dilute acetic acid, three and one-half ounces of water. Combine these and rub freely into the scalp and hair every day. The discolored and weathered hair will probably continue to drop out for a week or two then the new growth should begin to make speedy progress.

Freckle Remover.

A bleaching cream that will help to remove freckles requires two ounces of pure stannous hydroxide added to half an ounce of glycerine, a drachm and a half of citric acid and half an ounce of alcohol. Mix these and three drops of ambergris. Mix the honey, but do not let it get too hot. It is the only time while the citric acid is dissolving in the spirits add the ambergris to the latter then beat the mixture to gether, using a silver fork. Use both in the way of method in the preparation a china bowl being the best for the beating and keep in small porcelain jars.

Skin Bleaches.

In using lemon juice to clear the skin of blemishes a cold cream must always be applied after the juice has dried on, otherwise the acid causes an unpleasant roughness which ruins the skin. Cucumber rind rubbed on is a good bleach but this too, makes the skin rough and cold cream should be applied after using the rind.

Charity itself fulfills the law. And who can ever love from charity?—Shakespeare.

Summer Bathing

Bathe with reason in summer as well as winter. Do not drop your warm bath and indulge only in cold plunges. You will be the more comfortable for an occasional hot bath. And remember that a very cold bath either in ocean, still water or a tub, can bring on cramps and serious intestinal troubles. If take a two hour after a hearty meal. Another folly is depending upon sea bathing when at the shore for cleansing purposes. Sea or lake bathing is merely a sport and the body should always be cleansed by still or fresh water after a dip of this sort.

The average man sponges off his body with the bucket of water left in each bathhouse after his plunge. The average woman rubs off the salt water and dresses without bathing because she says fastidiously that she does not like the looks of that 'mucky bucket.' Continued bathing in salt water, unrelieved by a fresh sponge, is not good for the skin.

In summer a warm, not hot, bath at night is most cooling and the bath in the morning should be only a quick sponge with cool, not cold water. The woman who dresses in the middle of the afternoon or just before dinner and bathes then should not bathe just before retiring. The quick morning sponge and the moderate afternoon or evening bath are quite sufficient for each twenty four hours.

The Vacationist's Eyes

If there is one time when the eyes are more severely taxed than at any other it is during summer months. Free from the whirl of business or social affairs, the fair vacationist grasps the long sought opportunity to indulge her love of reading or delicate embroidery.

Quite generally she reads while reclining in a comfortable hammock under the trees or stretched at full length on the porch or bedroom couch. "I know it's not right," says one independent girl, "but it's my vacation and I'm going to be comfortable."

A noted oculist who considers the happiness of a patient as well as her physical good insists that there is no harm whatever in reading in a reclining position if the head is well bolstered up and the light shines on the book over the left shoulder. Nothing is more fatiguing to the eyes than attempting to use them when a strong light is pouring straight into them. The habit of reading in the hazy light after sundown is equally injurious.

Accidents at Table.

If an accident happens at table, such as overturning a glass or breaking a bit of china, apologize at some other time than at the table. To say you are sorry is enough at the moment.

Too General For Compliment.

No woman is flattered by the enthusiastic announcement of a man that he would do anything for the ladies. Everything for the "lady" would be more to her taste.

"Any minute," Jane answered coolly. "He should be here now." She cast a bored look of aseptic elegance at Dick, as if to say "Is there any reason why he shouldn't be my guest if I choose to have him?" But the glance was lost on Dick, or he preferred to ignore it. He dropped his splendid air for an expression of real alarm. Impulsively he took her hand again. She made as if to withdraw it, but the reporter's grasp was firm.

"Jane," he exclaimed, "Bob mustn't see Brand here. I am not questioning you or your motives, but I know Bob's feelings toward that man and I know that Brand can't be here with his knowledge." He turned quickly toward the table for his hat. "I'll get out and stop him," he said. "Tell Bob I was here if he comes first. He might see me. I'll say I was down to the German's."

The reporter's mind worked rapidly. He started hurriedly to the door. "Wait!" Jane ordered. "You'll do nothing of the sort. I'll attend to this thing myself. Mr. Brand wouldn't pay any attention to you in the first place and in the second I don't want to stop his coming here. Bob has got to know sooner or later and it might as well be today. Whatever you may think, I've done nothing that is ashamed of."

"I don't say you have, Jane. I'm not accusing you of anything. I am just looking at it from the outsider's point of view. Honestly," he continued warmly, "I haven't a thought in the world that you have done anything wrong, but you may have blundered, and Jane, when a poor man's wife secretly meets a rich man in her husband's absence, it's going to take a lot of love to keep him from guessing at what's been going on."

His hand was still on the door-knob. "Don't you think I had better go?" he insisted.

"No, I don't." The sound of footsteps on the walk told them that further argument was useless. It was Reynolds. He greeted them both and came forward to kiss his wife.

"Why, how fine you look, honey," he said. "Where you going out?"

He stood surveying her hat, her face, her dress down to her well-shod feet, as one might look over the fine parts of a thoroughbred. And that is what she was.

"Trotty fine looking wife I've got, eh, Dick?" he said, not facetiously, but with a trace of real pride.

"There's no doubt about that," the reporter agreed.

"And pretty finely doctored out, too. Makes all those things herself. I don't see how she does it, but she does."

Obviously, to light a cigarette, Dick turned away. He could not face his friend or Jane while Reynolds spoke those words that so palpably betrayed his wife's deception. His heart went out to Bob. Who does not feel an aching throbb for the blind husband, the big man, good and true, who benefits of a wife's enterprise and loyalty when his head should drop with hers for shame? Dick thought of Brand and felt the rushing of his blood through-out his veins. If the millionaire had stopped in at that instant he might have had need of more than civility to save him from a fate that was justly his.

Reynolds, oblivious to all these thoughts, addressed his wife:

"Don't let us interfere with your afternoon, dear," he continued. "Dick and I are going to work here, so you just toddle right along. Come on, my philistine," he said to Dick, "here's material for your talents and it's a good two-hour job."

He deposited on the table a bundle of reports and maps and drew up two chairs.

"What is the idea, Bob?" asked Jane. "I didn't know you had taken Dick into partnership."

"Nor have I, but he has consented to share a few of the wonderful phrases that he wastes on dovers air and turn them to some purpose. He's going to help me draw up a final report on the Peace dam. It's my biggest job and I want to make it sound impressive—a sort of literary classic, you know."

A ring at the door startled Dick and Jane.

"I'll go," she said quickly, but Reynolds interposed. He stepped to the door and admitted Mrs. Collins. The avenue was setting rapidly, but the villain seemed to have missed his cue. He was late.

"Why, Mr. Reynolds," exclaimed her buxom neighbor, "aren't you home early? Lookie like it's going to be quite a party." She looked at Jane, but found no enlightenment there.

"Well, here I am," she continued. "It's the best I can do, getting ready in a minute. Isn't Mr. Brand come yet?"

Reynolds, bending over the papers at the table, started slightly at the question and paused as if doubting whether he had heard aright. The smile died from his face and he looked up, not at Jane, but at Dick. The reporter's face was blank.

"Well, maybe he isn't coming now," Mrs. Collins added, and to Jane, "Shall I go?"

"Oh, no," Reynolds interpolated quickly. "He's coming. He was delayed a little."

He was smiling now. He looked at his wife.

"You see I met him just before I left the office. I don't know, though, whether he can take you riding or not."

Jane was white. Her voice came as cold as ice.

"Why not?" she asked.

"Why, you see, Brand has an appointment here with Dick and me—a business appointment. I am sure he will be very much occupied. But I don't want you and Mrs. Collins to lose your ride. Brand will lead you his car."

"No, I think I'll be going," said Mrs. Collins. "I don't think this is going to be a very good day for auto riding."

"Wait," Jane demanded. "There's Mr. Brand now."

They heard the car stop in front. Jane started to the door.

"I'll go," said Reynolds, and his tone suggested quite forcibly that no one else would. The three stood as if petrified as he opened the door.

"What, you home?" said the astonished Brand.

"Then you didn't expect to see me?"

"No, and you know I didn't," the millionaire responded curtly. He stood in his big coat with fur cap in hand, an imposing figure, like some monstrous bear at bay. He glanced from one to the other. There was none of the coward in Brand. His sly smile added insult to injury.

"Quite a little family gathering," he remarked.

He looked particularly at Jane. There was a searching keenness in the glance as if he would ferret out from her, if possible, the meaning of the other's presence. She met the stare fairly and openly without a sign of embarrassment. If for a moment the millionaire had suspected some trap the thought had vanished now.

He advanced and took the hand extended then with a brief nod to Mrs. Collins, turned to Dick.

"Lord, you're as persistent as a shadow," he said.

"But more effective," the reporter smilingly suggested.

Brand scanned the faces quickly. Dick's words had conveyed no intelligence to the others. The big man saw this. He smiled in turn.

"Just a bit more," he ventured. He stepped towards Bob. "Well, what's the idea?" he continued. "I'm here. We're all here. What next?"

There was no levity in Reynolds' voluble reply. Brand saw the look, but his own never wavered.

"Why, you came over to take the ladies out riding, Mr. Brand, but I've got some business that I think you'll be interested in and I thought you might let them take a whirl in the car while you and I stay here and talk it over. When I got through they can come back and the car can take you home."

"That's satisfactory to me," Brand answered. "You'll find the car outside. Mrs. Collins. You, too, Mrs. Reynolds."

Jane, who had stood like a statue since her brief greeting to the millionaire looked from him to her husband. She did not shrink, but the words she framed were slow in coming and Brand went on:

"How long, Reynolds?" he asked sharply. He glanced at a handsome watch and snapped it shut.

"Oh, about half an hour," Bob informed him. "Our business may take less than that, but we don't want to spoil the ladies' trip."

Dick, watching with admiration his friend's calm manipulation of the scene, felt that in the forthcoming sequel his presence would be unnecessary. He reached for his hat.

"If you'll pardon me," he said, "I think I'll venture for a little while as before."

"No," answered Reynolds quickly, and his tone was a command. "You stay."

Brand looked up with something much akin to a sneer.

"Is that necessary?" he asked.

"Not necessary, Mr. Brand, but advisable," snapped Bob. "Our business is latently between us, but it may be well to have a witness."

In this little domestic drama Reynolds had quickly assumed the role of master, but he had reckoned without the mistress. In reality it was Jane who had called what now seemed an ill-fated stay. If it was on the rocks she would stay by the wheel. She advanced to her husband. She was quite cool.

"Bob," she said. "Mr. Brand is here at my invitation. This business you speak of is quite as much my concern as yours. If Mr. Brand is to stay I will stay, too."

"I'm sure you're willing for Mrs. Collins to use the car a while and you won't mind if she picks up a neighbor or two?"

"Not at all," he assented.

"Will you tell the chauffeur?"

"That isn't necessary," he answered. "He'll understand."

Jane's words offered a means of escape if he wanted it, but Brand wasn't looking for escape. Mrs. Collins adopted her friend's solution of one difficulty and withdrew. Brand faced Reynolds.

"Well, what's the business?"

"I don't think that you need me," Dick interrupted. "This seems to be between you three."

"No, stay, Dick!" Reynolds insisted. "You're the only friend I have here."

"Bob!" his wife exclaimed. "You don't know what you're saying."

"I mean everything I said and everything I'm going to say. We'll come to your side of it later. First I want to hear from this man."

"That's easy," Brand responded. "I'm here by appointment to meet your wife. You're here with three witnesses. At first I thought I knew why you and your friend were here, but I don't think so now. If Mrs. Reynolds hasn't told you the purpose of my visit, you'd better learn from her. Do you take me for a common philanthropist? If you do you're crazier than I thought you. But I'm not here to argue. If Mrs. Reynolds doesn't explain, I will."

The belligerent attitude of the millionaire maddened Bob almost beyond control. With doubled fists he advanced and shook one within an inch of Brand's face.

"Explain!" he shouted, "what is there for her to explain. I don't want any explanation from her; I want it from you. You may have fooled her with your devilish clever pretenses, but you can't fool me. If there's any other way for me to figure this out than just one way, God knows I need to know."

"Bob, don't be foolish," Jane warned. "You might go too far even with me. This isn't the first time Mr. Brand has been here. It was not intended to be his last. I have schemed and planned and conspired, but you might misinterpret my motive and I wouldn't advise you to do that."

He turned on her now, his patience exhausted.

"You poor little idiot," he cried, "are you still defending him, or are you still playing the game? When a wife deceives her husband there's only one answer and that's my answer to you."

Brand, standing erect and with a bored look throughout, replied for her. He looked at Jane.

"He knows that isn't true," he said. "He can see it in your face and I can see that he sees it."

But Jane, with reddened cheeks and flashing eyes, was not satisfied with this pacification. She faced her husband.

"So that is the measure of your ideals!" she said with scorn. "That gives me your character right in the palm of my hand. The first thing that even looks questionable, you turn on me like a woman of the street. Mr. Brand," she added, turning to the millionaire, "you had better go."

"No, he won't," her husband shouted. "He'll stay right here. I want to know something from him before he leaves this house—if he does leave it—and I want to know it now."

CHAPTER XVI.

THE DENOUNCEMENT.

They heard the honk of the returning car and Mrs. Collins' thanks and farewell to the chauffeur. Brand took out his watch, then glanced at Reynolds.

"I don't want to be disagreeable," he said, "but this nonsense has got to end for me. Shall we invite my chauffeur in?"

His voice was quiet enough, but his meaning was clear and the vexation that his tone implied was sincere.

Brand was good at a bluff, but he was ready, too, to back a threat with deeds. The storm cloud was about to break. Jane saw it and felt her first alarm.

"Wait," she said excitedly, "wait just a minute. Bob shall know all he wants and more."

"Then, if you don't mind," the millionaire suggested, "let's be seated."

He fetched a chair to Jane.

"Bob," his wife began, "if you want to learn all the truth you've got to stay in front of me. Mr. Brand can tell you why he has come here—he came to ask me to leave him. But that is all. That night, five weeks ago when he came for the first time we heard what he proposed. I heard it as well as you. You formed your opinion and gave your verdict and I formed mine."

Brand raised his hand.

"Pardon me," he said suavely, and pointed the hand toward Dick. "I think our friend here was playing ploochie. He didn't hear. I see no reason why he should hear now."

The reporter jumped to his feet.

"Pardon me," he replied. "This is no party of mine." He stepped toward the door. But Reynolds would not let him go.

"Let him stay, then," Brand agreed. "Honesty and harmlessness go hand in hand."

Jane looked again at Bob. She ignored the others.

"When I married you five years ago what did I become?"

"My wife, I hope."

"But is that all? Wasn't there something more? Didn't we say that we would be partners, and didn't I say that was the only way I would become the wife of any man, no matter how much I loved him? Bob, you have broken the partnership and I have gone on alone. That night when Mr. Brand came I wanted to talk to you, but you would have none of it. I can't not have you interfere. That was what you said. Well, I have interfered. Mr. Brand offered to help you make forty thousand dollars. You called it stealing. I called it something else. You turned Mr. Brand away and gave your scornful ultimatum. I asked him to come again. I wrote to him and talked to him. In a most important business matter the partners did not agree, that's all. Mr. Brand thought that I might bring you to your senses, or to my way of thinking, if you preferred that. I thought so, too. I didn't want to let this chance slip by, if you did. I considered you, but I considered myself, too. It means as much to me as to you, perhaps more. Have you ever really seriously thought what it means? Have you thought what my life is here, compared to yours? You and Dick sit here after you've done your work and theorize and rise up to martyrdom, and what do I do? I'm in the house all the time. Up at six o'clock and tired out at night. I wash, I scrub, I sweep, I saw, I cook—or did until I saw an escape. And what are you doing? You're up in your office, rubbing shoulders with the man who governs things. You have excitement. You have to work, too, but you're a cog in the great, big wheel that makes the world go round—the world that I can't enter—while I have to sit here like a drudge."

Reynolds, standing tense and strained, for he had not seated himself with the others, wore a puzzled frown. The voice of discontent was crying aloud. But it was righteous discontent. He could find no falsity of note. And yet he had struggled hard. He had loved his wife and shared with her. He had given her love for love, loyalty for loyalty, and—had he given her dollar for dollar. What more could any man do? Still there was no injustice to her plea. A jury of twelve good men and true could not have doubted her sincerity. Where, then, was the hiatus? Was the partnership an unequal bargain in the first place? Had he aimed too high, or, aiming rightly, fired too soon? Was he, the mere provider, taking something to which he had no right? It was the old, eternal question, as old as the world; the question of a man and woman; what the one can give and what the other can command. Through a vaporous mist of thoughts that racked his brain and pierced his heart he saw a tangible something—just what, he did not know; but it was enough to make him turn to the man who had won where he had failed.

"Mr. Brand," he said—and his voice was low and choking—"if you please, you had better go."

The millionaire nodded curtly to each. At the door he turned and addressed Bob.

"Apologies are not forthcoming," he said. "Advice, too, seems to be lost on you. But take a tip from one who knows. Your wife is a sensible woman. Pay her a lot of attention."

FATAL WRECK at NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

PENNSYLVANIA COAL OUTPUT IS FIFTH OF WORLD PRODUCTION

Magnitude of State's Mining Operation Shown by Reports For 1913.

MINED 265,306,138 SHORT TONS

Belief Not That Limit of Yearly Production Has Been Reached and That Will Remain Fairly Constant From Now on Till Period of Decline.

Pennsylvania mined more coal in 1913, both anthracite and bituminous, than in any previous year in the history of the industry, according to a statement just issued by the United States Geological Survey from figures compiled by E. W. Parker, in cooperation with the Oklahoma Geological Survey. The production reached the enormous total of 265,306,138 short tons, valued at $58,229,344. Of this, 21,514,927 tons were anthracite, valued at $19,181,127 and 173,791,211 tons bituminous or soft coal, valued at $39,048,217. The total tonnage broke the previous record for 1912 by 19,079,057, about four or nearly 5 per cent, the proportionate increase being about the same for both anthracite and bituminous. The gain in the value of anthracite, however, was $17,565,581, or about 19 per cent over 1912 and in bituminous coal $21,493,309, or 14 per cent. The total gain over 1912 was $39,068,890, or nearly 12 per cent.

The magnitude of the coal mining industry in Pennsylvania, as represented by the output of the anthracite and bituminous mines, is probably little realized. The combined production of 265,306,138 short tons in 1913 exceeded by more than 20 per cent the total production of the United States in 1908, only 15 years previous. It exceeded that of any other country in the world, except Great Britain and Germany, and approached within less than 10 per cent of Germany's output. It was nearly five times the production of the Austro-Hungarian empire, nearly six times that of France, nine times that of Russia and Finland, and ten times that of Belgium. It was equal to nearly 20 per cent of the world's total production, and exceeded the combined output of all the countries of the world other than Great Britain, Germany, and the United States. From 1909 to and including 1909 Pennsylvania contributed over 50 per cent of the total coal production of the United States, and the state still produces between 45 and 50 per cent of the total.

There was a decided gain in 1913 in the number of working days made by the employees in Pennsylvania. In both the anthracite and bituminous mines, the former making an average of 257 days, compared with 231 days in 1912, and the latter 256 days, compared with 235 days in 1912. The anthracite mines gave employment to 175,745 men and the bituminous mines to 172,198 men. The unusually large number of working days enabled the miners to make exceptionally high records. The bituminous workers mining an average for the year of 1,609 tons each and the anthracite miners 622 tons.

It is pretty generally conceded by those interested in the production of anthracite that the limit of annual production has been reached and that the yearly output will remain fairly constant until the period of decline begins. Anthracite as a manufacturing fuel has been eliminated, and the increasing use of coke and gas for domestic purposes in the factories supplied by anthracite coal is approximately keeping step with the increase in population.

Anthracite mining began between 1790 and 1800, when a small quantity was produced for local consumption. To the close of 1913 the production of anthracite had amounted to 2,181,550,000 long tons, or 2,446,626,010 short tons.

The first records of the production of bituminous coal in Pennsylvania cover the year 1810, when 161,828 short tons were mined. The output of bituminous coal from 1810 to the close of 1913 has amounted to 1,731,913,030 short tons, from which it appears that the total production of bituminous

OKLAHOMA BREAKS RECORD

Mines Over Four Million Tons, Valued at $8,500,000.

Coal was mined in Oklahoma in 1913 to the amount of 1,166,770 short tons, valued at $5,524,748, both record-breaking totals for the State, according to figures compiled by E. W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey, in cooperation with the Oklahoma Geological Survey. Oklahoma, more than any other of the coal producing states in the Mississippi Valley and the Rocky Mountain region, was benefited by the late troubles in Colorado, as is shown by the increase in production over 1912, amounting to 499,352 tons, or 43.6 per cent. The value of the product increased $675,117, or 8.5 per cent. The smaller relative gain in value in 1913 was due to the fact that in 1912 prices were somewhat inflated because of the rather abrupt withdrawal of fuel oil from the markets where it had been in competition with Oklahoma coal and to a diminution in the supply of natural gas from the northern part of the Mid-Continent field, particularly in Kansas. The deficiency in Kansas production of natural gas is being made up, however, by developments in Oklahoma, and the result of these developments, and of the fact that the supply of coal is catching up with the demand on account of the increased production in 1913 is exhibited in the return to lower prices, the average value per ton in 1913 being the same as in 1911. The total number of men on strike in Oklahoma in 1913 was 1,696, and the average time lost by each man was 50 days.

Oklahoma continues to show a high percentage of coal shut off the solid, a practice encouraged by the laws of the state, which compel the payment of wages on the basis of mine-run coal. The number of days the men were able to work in 1913 shows a marked improvement over the two preceding years, and if no time had been lost by strikes the average number of days worked would have exceeded 200 by a good margin. As it was, the average time made by the 2,01 men employed was 97 days, compared with 87.55 men for 71 days in 1912. The average total production per man in 1913 was 161 tons.

The fatality record for Oklahoma in 1913, according to the Bureau of Mines, shows a decided improvement over 1912, when, owing to an explosion of gas and dust in the San Joaquin mine, at McArthur, the death toll was high. In that one explosion the lives lost amounted to more than three times the total number of deaths in 1912, when 23 fatal accidents occurred.

PRIZES AWARDED FOR BEST GARDENS AT EVANS PLANT

Big Improvement Noted and Arrived at a Decision Is Hard Matter.

The lawns and gardens of the Evans Coal & Coke Company at Evans Station were inspected Saturday and the following prizes were awarded: Garden, first prize, House No. 6, W. F. Perry, manager at station No. 1, $10. Second prize, House No. 10, Louis Hardy, miner at station No. 1, $5. Third prize, small house No. 10, Thomas Hittow, miner at No. 1, $2.50. The prizes for the best lawns were awarded as follows: First prize, House No. 6, Sam Johnson, shot-borer at station No. 2, $5. Second prize, House No. 3, Scott Firestone, laborer at No. 2, $2.50.

The prizes were awarded to the winners on Saturday by A. C. Stickle, president of the company. The money was all awarded in gold coin.

This was the first garden and lawn contest ever held at Evans Station. The lawns and gardens have shown a marked improvement since the contest was started. As has been the case at the other companies' inspection, it was a difficult matter to decide which lawns and gardens were the best kept up. The ladies highly complimented the miners on their efforts to keep their lawns and gardens in a sanitary, clean condition.

The judges were L. W. Leslie, Uniontown; J. W. Norton, of the W. J. Hatley company, and J. H. Miller of the President Coal & Coke Company.

MARYLAND HAS COAL RECORD

Output Nearly 5,000,000 Tons, With Little Labor Trouble.

The coal mined in Maryland in 1913 amounted to 4,779,839 short tons, valued at $5,527,046, according to figures compiled by E. W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey, in cooperation with the State Geological Survey. This was less than the amount mined in 1912 by 184,199 short tons, but the value showed a gain of $5,967 and exceeded that of any other year since 1907. The annual production of coal in Maryland has been fairly constant for the last 16 years, the smallest output in that period being in 1909, when it amounted to 4,023,211 tons, and the largest in 1907, when it reached 5,522,625 tons. The output in 1913 was very close to the average of the 15 years. It is not to be expected that the production will show any material increase in the future, as the "Maryland big vein," from which the larger part of the output has been obtained, is approaching exhaustion, and although there is still a good supply remaining in the thinner and deeper beds, it is not probable that the future annual tonnage from them will exceed the records of the past. If indeed it maintains the same importance.

The record of individual efficiency by the miners of Maryland is high. In 1913 the 5,645 men employed in the mines of the state worked an average of 214 days, with an average production by each man of 847 tons for the year. This is an exceptionally good average when it is considered that 4,379,929 tons, or 91.5 per cent of the total, was mined by hand. The quantity of coal shot off the solid was only 293,950 tons.

There was only one instance of labor trouble in 1913, and that was insignificant, 200 men being idle for two days. In 1912 there were but three strikes reported, the longest of which lasted 12 days.

The Bureau of Mines has reported 13 fatal accidents in 1913 in the coal mines of Maryland, the same number as in 1912, but as there were fewer men employed and a smaller quantity mined in 1913, the ratio of deaths was slightly increased and the tonnage per life lost slightly less. The records for both years were better than the average and were surpassed by only a few other states.
